Intercultural career guidance

Marcelo Afonso Ribeiro, University of São Paulo, Brazil

This seminar is an introduction to both epistemological, theoretical and practical principles of intercultural career guidance. Seminar offers practical approaches to confront prejudice, inequality, and social injustice, and co-construct intercultural dialogues in career guidance. These are demonstrated through concrete case examples from career guidance and counselling situations.

The framework presented is inspired by social constructionism, psychology of working and social justice framework from the Global North and contextualised theories from the South. These include critical pedagogy and the vulnerability and human rights framework.

The webinar will be in English.
